Dear Sir:

I am much pleased to receive your letter, and to learn that you are lecturing in Belgium on new methods in mathematical statistics. I thank you for the announcement of your book. It is in the new methods of statistical inference that my chief interest lies. I am slowly writing a book which will include these methods along with a treatment of probability, and which will give special attention to the work of R. A. Fisher.

Please transmit my good wishes to M. Errera and M. Darmon when you see them.

Very cordially yours,
Harold Hotelling
